Keynote - Dr. Harvey Karp
The Happiest Baby on the Block
Half of all new babies cry and fuss more than two hours a day. Their prolonged wails often cause exhaustion, breastfeeding failure, marital stress, maternal depression, SIDS and even child abuse. Caregivers traditionally have little more to offer these parents than reassurance...until now. Dr. Karp will present an innovative and effective approach proving why the missing ’4th trimester’(not gas) is the true cause of colic. Additionally, a previously unknown crying off-switch called the “calming reflex” will be discussed as well as the five simple steps of activating it--the 5 S’s.

The Happiest Toddler on the Block
Toddlers are pretty immature. From the point of view of language and social development they are uncivilized and in many ways remind us of little cave men! Dr. Karp offers a highly novel approach for toddler communication that better matches a toddler’s under-developed cognitive level. These techniques allow health workers to be much more successful in getting a young child’s (9m - 4y) cooperation and in giving counsel to parents. This approach helps bring about dramatic decreases in tantrums and increases in co-operative behaviour in just days.

I recently attended a ‘Happy Baby’ workshop with Dr. Karp and he is one of the most dynamic presenters I’ve ever seen. He shares his experiences and knowledge with warmth and humour.... and shows how the “calming reflex” works to comfort babies and increase sleep - for everyone! The techniques he uses to calm babies should be taught to all new parents, grandparents, caregivers... I’ve watched new parents use Dr. Karp’s 5 S’s and glow with pride when they succeed in calming their baby. Everyone wins! I’m delighted that he is coming to Winnipeg and that more people will learn about ‘The Happiest Baby’ and ‘The Happiest Toddler’ strategies for raising healthy, happy children.

Keynote - Kimberly Barthel
Connections: The Neurobiology of Attachment
Attachment is the connection that is created between caregivers and infants, contributing to the changing architecture of these two connecting brains. Through repeated interaction, neuronal connections are formed and strengthened within the brain laying down pathways that organize cognition, emotion and behavioral responses critical to functional interaction. This keynote will powerfully reinforce the importance of early attachment upon neurological development and behavioural interaction throughout the lifespan.
Harm Reduction Workshop  (September 2008)

On September 16th more than 80 service providers met at Crossways in Common to learn more about Harm Reduction. Thanks to Adina Lakser of the Manitoba Harm Reduction Network (MHRN), for a very informative and interactive presentation.

What is Harm Reduction? Harm Reduction can be defined as a set of strategies and tactics that encourages people to reduce harm to themselves and their communities, through the sharing of relevant information, facts and practical material tools, that will allow them to make informed and educated decisions. It recognizes the competency of their efforts to protect themselves, their loved ones and their communities. Simply put, harm reduction means engaging in activities that we know could harm us, but doing it in the least harmful way that we can.

The mandate of the MHRN is to make recommendations regarding development, implementation and evaluation of sexually transmitted (STI) and blood borne infection prevention initiatives. The MHRN also addresses issues such as the lack of housing, racism and stigma, gender discrimination, improving access to services and care and employment.

When asked for examples of Harm Reduction, the group came up with ideas such as condoms, needle exchange, controlled use programs, counselling, education, childcare, designated drivers, the buddy system and “don’t put your drink down”, to name a few.

For the service provider, harm reduction means providing care from a place of respect and using a non-judgemental approach. The group played the “Values Game” and “Rate the Risk”.

The intention of these games was to show that everyone has a set of core values which influence people’s opinions. The key to providing service from a harm reduction perspective is determining how we handle our own values and judgements when working with clients whose values and judgement may be different from our own. It is important to recognize when we might not be the best person to assist a client – there is no harm in referring the client to someone that may be in a better position to provide the client with what they need. Everyone engages in risky activities and that risk taking is a normal part of our existence. What is different though is how we perceive risk and that what you may perceive as risky, may not be risky to others. It is very important to understand your client’s assessment of risk when trying to encourage harm reduction options.

If we can get to a place where our relationships with the people we serve are genuine partnerships then we end up with amazing outcomes for all of us. This allows individuals to be the experts in their own lives, which improves the relationship with your client and also improves the overall health of the community.
